Castro's Hopes Based On Red China, Says Donovan

CPYRGHT

NEW YORK, Oct. 30. — (A.P.) — James B. Donovan, Democratic senatorial candidate, says he believes Cuban Prime Minister Castro's actions are based "on the capabilities and intelligence of Red China, including the possibility that Red China will soon have nuclear weapons."

Donovan made the statement last night in challenging an assertion of his Republican opponent, Senator Javits, in which Javits characterized Castro as a "pawn of Soviet Russia." The two appeared on a television program.

Donovan, who has been representing Cuban exiles in private negotiations for release of 113 Cuban invasion prisoners, said this country also will have to take into consideration in the present Cuban crisis that Castro "stands for certain principles" in Latin America.

He did not elaborate.

Javits asserted that "the Cuban people are still laboring under a terrible dictatorship, with a Khrushchev collar around their necks."
